NORTHAMPTON TOWNSHIP HISTORICAL SOCIETY

MARCH 2006

Enjoy a talk on Pennsylvania German Fraktur at our March meeting

Bucks County is rich in Pennsylvania German heritage, and according to Quakertown resident Ronald Trauger, it's also rich in an art form that has become big in the antique circuit, German Fraktur. "Bucks County is a hot bed for them," Trauger said. "People don't realize what they have." Trauger, who is a collector of the early Pennsylvania German drawings, will discuss what they are, their importance and the history at our March historical society meeting.

The primarily religious documents, which are made up of calligraphy type writing in German with colorfully drawn pictures, were used originally as documentation, like birth certificates. Trauger's presentation will consist primarily of a slide show and speech. He is also inviting anyone who believes they have a piece of German Fraktur to bring it along for appraisal or translation. When he began collecting the drawings 25 to 30 years ago, Trauger said there wasn't much of a market. "I did it out of pride for my ancestors," he said. Now the art form, which ranges in size, has gained steam in the antique market averaging $3,000 to $5,000 a piece and as much as $300,000. "When I started doing presentations, little did I know how much they would catch on and how valuable they'd be," Trauger said. "They're a very hot thing in the antique circuit."

Pieces dated between 1770 and 1830 are the most valuable. "My passion really is to just see these and document them," Trauger said. A collector, with approximately 600 pieces himself, Trauger also deals with clients throughout the United States and has given talks across the East Coast. In addition to the hundreds of German Fraktur drawings in his collection, Trauger also has thousands of photographs of people with their own pieces.

The art form originally came over to America from Europe with early German settlers, Trauger said. The early pieces, which usually include a date, are hand drawn on paper with German script and brightly colored pictures of birds, people and animals, in reds, yellows and greens. While some of the pieces are documentation of significant events, German Fraktur was also used for house blessings and can be found in the front of religious books. When the settlers first came over many, could not read or write, so they turned to Fraktur artists to draw up the documents. "Parents kept them as a source of pride or record," Trauger said, adding that at the time there was no form of public documentation.

Plan to attend this interesting talk on Fraktur at our next historical society meeting, Wednesday, March 22 at 7:30 PM. We will be meeting St. John's Methodist Church on Almshouse road across from Solly's farm stand. All are welcome.

NEWS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Members,

It's March and to me that always conjures up the arrival of spring – Daffodils and Tulips and the trees budding. Some of my daughters and I will be making the yearly trek to the flower show. It's one of the local events that make me glad to live in Bucks County.

I hope you all enjoy our featured speaker this month. I read about him in a newspaper article and thought you would enjoy the Fraktur art form that goes back to the 16th and 17th centuries. Fraktur is art and calligraphy and was prominent in Pennsylvania German culture.

I am looking forward to seeing you at our temporary meeting place this month, St John's Methodist Church on Almshouse Road across from Solly's. We are hoping our May meeting will be back at the library.

Happy Spring, With affection,

IT'S TIME TO RENEW YOUR MEMBERSHIP!!

An Interview with Norman Turner

By Betty Luff

Everyone in Richboro knew “Nat” Turner. What a guy! Since I am also a life-long resident, it was always a pleasure to shake his hand, talk about how Richboro has changed and the people we remember.

Norman’s parents, Fred and Virginia (Knoel) Turner. Taken about the time of their marriage in 1911.

“Nat” was born Robert Norman Turner on May 25, 1913. His parents were Fred and Virginia (Knoel) Turner. One year later, his sister, Ruth, arrived. Both were born in the white house at 880 Bustleton Pike, Richboro, which is still occupied by his sister. The property is just south of the intersection of Bustleton and Second Street Pike where their father, a Wheel Wright, operated a blacksmith shop. I have always known the corner as the “Turner Body Works.” Fred Turner was born in 1887 in a small stone house near the intersection of Neshaminy creek and Buck road. Virginia, born in 1885, came from Port Royal, Virginia. They were married in 1911 in Richboro. The blacksmith shop later became Turner Body Works where they made truck bodies. Norman recalled many experiences as a child at the shop. He was often enlisted to help his father in the shoeing of horses and one of his jobs of holding the horse’s lip with a pair of pliers to keep him from bucking. Norm’s son in law, Don Norin, recalls seeing the hearth at the shop as late as 1966 before it was dismantled and sold. He also took an interest in a double barrel shotgun, which dated back to 1860. It was still hanging in the shop. Norm later gave it to him. Nancy Turner relates a story that shows her grandfathers tenacity, “There was a big grinding wheel at the shop and one day he cut off the tip of his finger while using the wheel. He just dipped his finger in turpentine and continued working.” Nancy also remembers a welder that worked at the shop, Tommy Nadeau, “He would bring one of those metal lunch boxes to work each day and he always had yummy desserts that he would share with us.” Fred died in 1961 and Virginia in 1973. They both are buried in Newtown cemetery.

One of Norm’s first jobs was at the Luff and Traub general store, which was across the street from the Spread Eagle Inn on the southeast corner of route 232 and 332. This was probably his first business experience. He enjoyed helping the customers and he was so short he had to stand on a crate to use the cash register.

Norm attended the old Richboro High School, which was built in 1913, the year Norman was born. He graduated in 1931, along with his sister, Ruth, and seven other students. He went on to graduate from Ursinus College in 1935 with a degree in business.

Norman married Hilda Smith in 1938. Hilda was born October 10, 1909 in Rushland. She graduated from Hatboro High School and went on to work at Roberts and Manders. She was an accomplished pianist and played for the Sunday School at Addisville Church. Norm and Hilda became the parents of three daughters, Elaine, Sandra, and Nancy. Elaine passed away in 1998 and Hilda in 2000. They had celebrated 62 years of marriage. Sandra and her husband Don live in Churchville and Nancy lives in Richboro. Norman is the grandfather of three and has four great grandchildren.

In 1942, I was employed by the Reading Company in Philadelphia but did not have a license or a car. At this time Norman was employed by Rohm & Haas and since he passed the Churchville station each morning, he would drop me off. In 1942 neither cars or garages needed to be locked in Richboro, so I would walk down to his garage and wait in his car each morning for a free ride. Life-long friends never forget these things.

One of Norman's earliest ventures was to build and operate a potato chip factory next to the Holland Railroad Station. This was when Northampton farmers were producing great crops of potatoes. He also produced horseradish. Citadel Security Systems occupies the property today.

Norman, about the time he graduated from college in 1935.

Hilda (Smith) and Norman Turner. Hilda was an accomplished pianist. She played at Addisville Reformed Church.

I am sure not many of today's residents remember how treacherous the curves on Spring Garden Hill were years ago. In 1952, when Norman was president of the Northampton Township School Board, he along with Constable Jack Frey, Pennsylvania State Highway officials, Council Rock, and Northampton School principals had meetings and insisted on having the hill straightened and improved. It later was. When Norman was president of the school board, he pressed for the start of a kindergarten program at Richboro School. The kindergarten program started and ironically, his daughter, Nancy, was to become an Elementary School teacher and serve her career in the Pennsbury School District.

In the late 1950's Norman and his family moved to the house across the street on Second Street pike. Many of you know this as the house you would run into coming north on Second Street Pike if you did not take the left turn at Bustleton Pike. Indeed a few have missed this turn in the past and ended up in his front yard. He was so upset the last time it happened, in the 1990's, that he built a wall to replace the hedge.

Norman purchased a school bus business from Russell Lownes in 1954 and as it grew to 60 buses, it was necessary to build a bus garage south of his home. He ran the bus service, R.N. Turner Inc., which supplied all the buses for Council Rock and about 10 parochial schools until 1971. Norm would plan all of the routes, hire the drivers, and ensure that the buses were in good mechanical order, and all this before there were computers to assist him.

Richboro was growing in the early 1950's and Norman realized the need for more local shops, so he built a shopping center south of his house on Bustleton Pike in an area that not many years before had been a cow pasture. At first, it was just four stores and later became the long line of shops we know today. There have been many shops there over the years, including a drug store, bakeshop, cleaners, Post Office and many will remember "The Bee" a restaurant which is now Jake's Eatery. Most residents have seen Norman cleaning up his shopping center each day. He played an active role in his businesses and his tenants were always happy to see their landlord. Norm owned much of the town of Richboro at one time. He was very savvy at knowing when to buy and sell and he enjoyed it immensely. Nancy Turner recalls her father putting his children to work, stripping, painting, and cleaning his real estate purchases.

In talking with Norman, I also learned that he enjoyed playing golf.

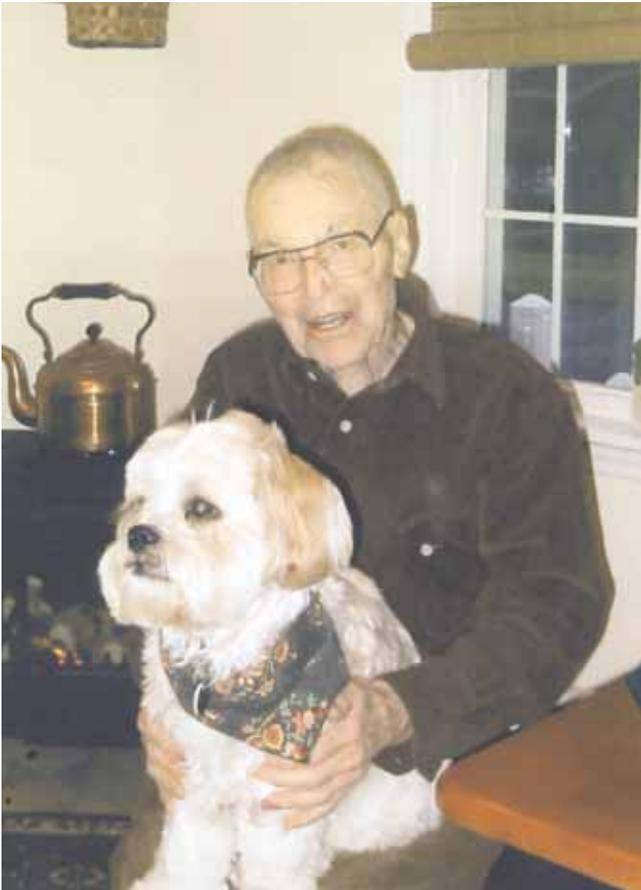

Norman dedicated countless hours to many organizations in the community. He and his wife were life-long members of the Addisville Reformed Church and both received silver platters. He also belonged to the Odd Fellows Lodge (building now, gone) located across from the Bash Barber Shop. Norman was also a sustaining member of the Northampton Township Historical Society. He served on the board of the North East Federal Savings and Loan, now known, as Bank of America. He served as president and member of the Board of Managers of Union Cemetery. He was a member of the Northampton Township Business and Professional Association and was the recipient of the "Business Person of the Year" award in the late 1990's. He supported the Northampton Lions Club, the Council Rock Kiwanis Club, the Bucks County Boy Scouts of America and many Council Rock and Northampton Township youth organizations.

Norman passed away on January 27, 2006, at the age of 92. He is buried along with his wife Hilda in Union Cemetery, Richboro.

Norman will be remembered for his energy and steadfast presence in Richboro, and the Northampton Township communities. He will be deeply missed by his family and all who knew and respected him.

THANK YOU, NORMAN, you loved your town and we loved you.

We originally intended to publish this story on Norman's life by Betty Luff before his death but unfortunately that was not possible. Norman Turner was an important part of Richboro's history. I only wish he had the opportunity to see this HISTORIA but then I am sure he has, as he will always look over his town of Richboro!

Dr. Cameron Wilson and Norman Turner, December 2005 at Clearview Nursing home.

In early December 2005, I took Dr. Cameron Wilson to visit Norm at the Clearview Nursing Center on Twiningford Road. I wish I had taken a video camera or tape recorder as the two Richboro natives talked at length about their memories of the past.

Camie remembers his father purchasing a truck body from the Turner Body Works to make a trailer that they used to haul tomatoes to the Campbell Soup Company. Later as a veterinarian, he was always breaking a 'dehorner' used to remove the horns from calves. Fred Turner fixed it for him using wagon wheel spokes and to this day, he still has it. Camie misses the talks he had with Norm at the Richboro Post Office and their bi-weekly poker games in Norm's basement. Norm had a basement room added with a wood burning stove just for their social group. Jimmy Mclean, Scott Gormley, Raleigh Dennis were among those that regularly attended.

I was so glad that both Camie Wilson and I were able to see Norm one last time.
